THIRD EDITION BEFORE PUBLICATION.

THE STORY

Stirring situations, quaint and lovable characters, a delightful triple love-story and, above all, a picture such as has never before been drawn of the struggles of a high-spirited people to adjust themselves to the harsh circumstances of the conquered, give Mr. Harris's new novel a place by itself in American literature. It is true historical fiction, without a single historical character in it.

COMMENT

son Speaks in the Courthouse of Patrick County.

CHRISTIANSBURG, VA., October 20
Owing to the inclement weather the attendance at court was not as large as would otherwise have been, yet a fairsized crowd was in attendance. Very little business was before the court, so promptly at 12 o'clock Judge O. W. Pierce adjourned his court, introduced Hon. Carter Glass, the Democratic nominee for Congress, who made a short speech, in which he lauded the new Constitution and the countless blessings it had bestowed upon the people of Virginia. He told why he voted against the Barbour-Quarles resolution in the Constitutional Convention; said he would do it again, and had no apologies to make. He saiu he had nothing harsh to say against Mr. Aaron Graham, the Prohibition candidate, who was a citizen of this town, but the liquor issue in this campaign was absurd; that if he was elected he would accomplish nothing in Congress to that end.

paign was absurd; that if he was elected he would accomplish nothing in Congress to that end.

DEMOCRATIC DUTY.

He urged that the Democrats go to the polis and register their votes for their nominee and their party principles, and as it was the first election under the new registration he thought it was the duty of every Democrat to vote, and see how their strength compared with that of the Republicans. He said he had never drank a drop of liquor in his life; always voted against the traffic when a local option election was held, but the Prohibition party would never control the liquor traffic until Gabriel blowed his horn.

Mr. Glass closed with an urgent appeal to all who were opposed to the principles of the Republican party to go to the polls and vote the Democratic ticket, and in a few well-chosen words introduced Judge William Hodges Mann, of Nottoway, who spoke for an hour upon the issues of the present campaign.

JUDGE MANN'S SPEECH.

It was Judge Mann's first appearance before a Montgomery audience, and he sustained his reputation as an eloquent and able expounder of the principle of the true Democracy. He said there was no more earnest advocate of temperance in the State than himself, but he believed in fighting the liquor question in

The Anglo-Saxon race would now rule without the fear of negro domination ever disturbing our body politics. He said under the corporation commission, the farmer would be relieved from a great burden of taxation, and the just share of the corporations would now be borne by them. Owing to the inclement weather the at-no more earnest advocate of temperance in the State than himself, but he believed in fighting the liquor question in a practical manner, and that was within the party. He declared that nothing had ever been accomplished by the Prohibition party, and nothing ever could be accomplished by it, because it was extreme. Judge Mann told how the negro had been forever removed as a factor from Virginia politics, and the State would now advance with rapid strides until under the rule of pure Democracy we would soon be one of the leading States of the Union, and dishonest elections would now be a thing of the past.

issues, and said the tariff was the chief cause of the trusts and all the other great evils of the national body politic, and urged the people to rise up in their might and vote for the party opposed to these evils. He urged the Democrats to vote for Carter Glass for Congress, and assured them that he would forge ahead as a leader in Congress just as he had done in the Virginla Senate and the Constitutional Convention.

SENATOR BARKSDALE.

Senator W. P. Barksdale, of Halifax, arose after Judge Mann had closed and addressed the audience upon all the issues of the day, speaking for an hour or more, and said it was a huge joke that Aaron Graham was a candidate; that he would not know the way to Washington if elected. Cy H. Lyle, the Democratic nominee in the First Tennessee District, is making an active canvass of the district, and it is said that his speeches are ingenious and calculated to strengthen the opposition to Congressman Brownlow in his own party. Brownlow is hustling as a man who feared that the opposition might down him. He is exercising his ingenuity to secure Democratic votes to offset the hundreds of Republican votes that are to be cast against him.

This is the first time in years that a Democrat has had hopes of winning in the First Tennessee District, which normally gives a Republican majority of 10,000.
